Rx Tri-Antiseptic

Tri-antiseptic contains no soap, and in the hardest tap water gives a fine colloidal suspension. The illustration shows the different effects, on greasy hands, produced by dilutions of Tri-antiseptic (fine bubbles) and an other antiseptic (large drops). The effective wetting action of the Tri-antiseptic is clearly shown and is due to its low surface tension. This is obviously an important characteristic since for maximum efficiency an antiseptic must make intimate contact with treated surfaces and their bacterial and other contaminants.

VOL. XLIII. No. 14 SATURDAY, APRIL 19, 1947

EDITOR: MISS K. F. ARMSTRONG, S.R.N., S.C.M., DIPLOMA IN NURSING, LONDON UNIVERSITY

Training Experiments

THE most encouraging sign in the nursing world, to-day, is the fact that experiment is definitely in the air: and this, in spite of the difficulties due to shortage of staff and lack of buildings and the impossibility of embarking rapidly on the new extensions of hospital and nursing home accommodation that are so urgently needed. In these days when there is much of the aftermath of total war that is depressing, both nationally and internationally, this indication of the will to go forward is most cheering.

We have described no small number of these experiments in the pages of the Nursing Times during the last year or so. Outstanding have been the introduction of the study day system of training at the London Hospital, the wide use of the part-time nurse by the Gloucestershire County Council, which other authorities have, and are, wisely following, and the even more recent introduction of an eight-hour rota at the Queen Elizabeth Hospital, Birmingham. This week our issue is largely given over to a description of the way in which another famous hospital, Guy's, has successfully introduced a block system of training.

In spite of the fact that it was one of the most damaged of London's hospitals—we believe St. Thomas's alone was more often hit—plans for a block system have been put into effect during the last six months. Guy's was lucky in having a country house near Redhill, given to it before the war and now de-requisitioned, which made the experiment possible; for many who would like to follow suit the housing difficulty will be more difficult to overcome.

The Board of Governors is to be congratulated in having accepted a generous plan which should give the student nurse a good opportunity to master the theoretical side of her training without difficulty. The preliminary training school period is 12 weeks and both the first and second year periods are six weeks in length. This should make it possible to cover the syllabus of instruction without cramming and allow ample time for study and reading. This is certainly an important factor, and one which the critics of the block system have always stressed. If this system is to succeed, it is vital that the block periods of study should not be used for cramming, but should allow the student nurses to grasp and integrate the material that is presented to them. The student nurses who have had experience of acquiring knowledge in the old fashion, by lectures attended during day or night duty in the wards, find the new method comparatively a very marked improvement and speak wholeheartedly in its favour.

We have included in this issue a case study made by a group of the student nurses in the second year block (see page 262); three of them presented the case to the group, illustrating it with diagrams of the apparatus used in treatment, X-ray films and specimens. They led the discussion on it and had certainly acquired a good grasp of the subject and could explain the whys and wherefores of the various steps taken to ensure the patient's recovery. How much more they should retain the knowledge accumulated in this way than the information given to them by a lecturer, however good he or she may be.

Will the scheme divorce practice and theory: for that is the other criticism of this system? There is no reason why it should do so. One sister tutor is available particularly to help the student nurses who are working in the wards, and all student nurses are encouraged to come to the teaching department for reference books, discussion of their ward work and nursing charts. Further, the ward sisters not having to spare student nurses for lectures when they are assigned to the wards, have better opportunity to teach them and will realize the fact that their place as an essential part of the teaching staff of the school of nursing is fully recognized and that the keenness and progress of the student nurses is dependent on them.

Other hospitals will watch this experiment with no little interest and some envy: many are planning to follow this further addition to the small group of hospitals which have succeeded in lessening the strain of training by dividing the theoretical from the practical work. Meanwhile no hospital which has introduced either the longer block or the study day system has returned to its previous training scheme.

Miss G. Zachariah, of Travancore State, who is shortly returning to her own country as the first Indian industrial nurse to be appointed to India. Miss Zachariah is a trained nurse and midwife, and won a scholarship given by the Public Health Section of the Royal College of Nursing to the Trained Nurses Association of India

Topical Notes

Later Annual Meetings

THE annual meetings of the Royal College of Nursing this year will take place in Sheffield in the month of July. The date has purposely been put back to allow the many members of the College who are attending the International Congress of Nurses in Atlantic City in May, time to make the various visits and contacts for which their journey across the Atlantic will provide an opportunity. The Annual General Meeting will be held on Thursday, July 3, and the various sections of the College and the Student Nurses' Association will probably hold their meetings between July 1 and July 5. It is not the first time that the Sheffield Branch has acted as host to the Royal College of Nursing, and members will look forward to revisiting this important industrial centre.

Australian Retirement

NURSES in England will share the regret of the Royal Victorian College of Nursing of Australia on the resignation of their President, Miss J. Bell, O.B.E., who is known to many here through her International work for nurses. The editor of the Journal (U.N.A.) writes: "Miss Bell is recognized as the outstanding pioneer of nursing reforms in Australia. She played an important part in the foundation of the Australian Nursing Federation—which has enabled Australia to affiliate with the International Council of Nurses." Miss Bell also introduced the position of sister tutor which has been adopted throughout the country and arranged for post-graduate nursing courses to be conducted by the College, through lectures. Miss Bell's retirement will be an international loss as she is deeply interested in the educational and cultural side of nursing and is an ardent supporter of the Florence Nightingale International Foundation; we feel sure her interest and good wishes will continue to support all International nursing work.

1066, Industrial Nursing, and All That

"THIS is a good thing," said Sir Raymond Street, chairman of the Cotton Board. Representing one of Britain's "backbone" industries, he made this assertion about industrial nursing to 145 industrial nurses who came from all parts of Great Britain to Manchester University last week-end for their first residential conference, arranged by the Industrial Nursing Organizer, Royal College of Nursing. But, unlike the author of 1066 and All That, he backed his absolute verdict with sound reasons. The "good old days" of profits based on wastage, unlimited cheap labour and no competition, were gone. We must now make the best use of every labour unit. The moral, physical, mental and spiritual health of every worker must be maintained at the highest level. Sir Raymond Street congratulated the College on the inclusion of industrial nursing in its training courses and welcomed the fruitful collaboration between the College and the University. Industrialists, said Sir Raymond, must realize the value of a highly trained industrial nurse. She must become one of the industrial team, must believe in the worth-whileness of industrial life and must like the industrial worker. Sir Raymond said he brought her a welcome, an assurance and a testimony, from the world of industry in Manchester.

Techniques, Psychology and Training

THE sun shone on the conference. Industrial sisters walked and talked in the spring sunshine, on spacious green lawns, among flowering crocus and daphne. If the time was happy, the place was apt. Manchester University is the first in the country to have a chair of Industrial Health, and its occupant, Professor R. E. Lane, F.R.C.P., presided at the first lecture and led a very dynamic discussion on "The Universities' Part in the Training of Industrial Medical and Nursing Services." From this, two important points arose: the necessity of setting a high standard for the industrial nursing certificate, and the overwhelming desire of industrial nurses for taking the course for this on a part-time basis, in spite of the amount of hard work this would involve. This is, perhaps, a pity because the brain, tired after a full day's work, is less able to master fresh matter well. The outlook of industrial nurses may well change when it becomes the custom to demand qualification before appointment—the ideal arrangement. We hope to give a full account of the lectures in later numbers of the Nursing Times.

New Source of Fats

THE urgency for increasing our supply of fats has made the plan for the production of groundnuts in East and Central Africa a matter of real and vital import. We were privileged recently to have first hand information about this scheme when we were invited to visit Unilever House and have information at the "fountain head." This scheme will be tackled in a way unknown before to any industrial undertaking abroad, for the knowledge gained in Burma during the war will be acted upon when 150,000 acres are to be cleared for planting this year. Surplus military stores will be used and the tractors, bull-dozers and rippers which did such vast jobs for the nation during the war will now have their attentions turned to our problems of peace. This is an immense scheme, for the main part of the land is infested by tsetse fly which will have to be dealt with, as will the many and varied labour and social problems. The actual farming will call for over 32,000 African workers and about 750 European staff. Such a project obviously will abound in problems but the originators of the scheme are intent on securing "healthy, contented labour." The health problems themselves will be great, but "forewarned is forearmed," and doubtless the planning of such things as nursing services, clinics and the like are well under way. The nursing services will call for staff with pioneering spirit, adaptability and initiative as well as first class administrative ability. We hope that they will be brought in early enough to assist in the planning of their own particular side of this important piece of urgent national development.

Part-Time Nursing Recruitment

THE London County Council's part-time service recruitment campaign resulted in the introduction of 690 new workers into their hospitals up to March 26. Of these 169 were ward sisters or staff nurses, 47 midwives, and 135 assistant nurses. There were also 197 orderlies and 121 women domestic assistants and 15 male domestic assistants. These various groups have together produced the equivalent of 352 full-time workers, a welcome addition to the strength of the nursing and domestic staffs. The council will not issue further figures with regard to the response to this campaign, but we hope they will be able to say, as Gloucestershire has said already, that the part-time worker was the best advertisement of the scheme and brought her friends and acquaintances to swell the numbers. Gloucestershire took five months to recruit 100 nurses and orderlies, but the figure was over 300 seven months later.

Louis Pasteur Exhibition

WELL worth a visit is the Louis Pasteur Exhibition, opened last week at the Science Museum, South Kensington, by M. Rene Varin, Cultural Counsellor at the French Embassy in London. The exhibition has been arranged as part of the United Nations' Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization's "International Month." Admission is free and the exhibition is open until May 26th. The exhibition contains relics, demonstration apparatus, models and diagramatic and photographic illustrations. It is a fitting record of one to whom medicine owes so much, although he was not a doctor.

Wiltshire Part-Time Nursing

FOLLOWING upon the success of the part-time nursing scheme in Gloucestershire, her neighbour, Wiltshire is holding a conference to launch a similar scheme on April 18, at the County Hall, Trowbridge. Mr. Leonard Hussey, the Public Assistance Officer, has planned a full programme for this occasion, and has published an attractive booklet explaining his plans. We note that the same rates

CONGRESS AND COUNCIL

SPEAKING at a meeting arranged by the London Branch of the Royal College of Nursing, held at Guy's Hospital, Miss D. M. Smith, O.B.E., the matron, gave an interesting account of the development of the International Council of Nurses and an outline of the Congress to be held in America in May. "The International Council of Nurses was formed," said Miss Smith, "in London, by the late Mrs. Bedford Fenwick, and, as time went on, other countries joined : the United States of America, Germany, Canada, Denmark, Finland, Holland, India, New Zealand, Belgium, China, Norway, South Africa, France, Eire, Poland, Greece, Sweden and Iceland. (Now there are 31 member countries.—ED.) From each country one association of nurses may join, for example, the National Council of Nurses, which is composed of the various Nurses' Associations and Leagues of the country. The President of the International Council, who holds office from one Congress to the next, is Miss Effie Taylor, of the United States.

"There has been, of late, a great deal of discussion regarding the functions of the National Council, but I would remind you that through the International Council much can be done to raise the standard of nursing throughout the world, by international help and support. Individual nurses can get help when visiting other countries and their whole outlook can be widened by interchange of ideas and friendships made. Let us remind ourselves for what the National Council stands," said Miss Smith. 'The essential idea for which the International Council of Nurses stands is self-government of nurses in their Associations, with the aim of raising even higher the standards of education and professional ethics, public usefulness and civic spirit of their members. The International Council of Nurses does not stand for a narrow professionalism, but for that full development of the human being and citizen in every nurse which will best enable her to bring her professional knowledge and skill to the many-sided service that modern society demands of her.'

"Congresses have been held," continued Miss Smith, "in Buffalo, Berlin, Cologne, Copenhagen, Helsinki, Montreal, Paris-Brussels and London. At each a watchword has been given, the last one being 'Loyalty,' given by Dame Alicia Lloyd Still, the President, in 1937.

"I feel rather like a soothsayer or very minor prophet," continued Miss Smith, "on being asked to speak on the Congress before it takes place, but I can only think that the arrangements will be very much like other Congresses. Perhaps I may be forgiven, therefore, if I look back, so that we may try to imagine what our visit to America may be like. Many of those present no doubt remember the London Congress, and meeting many of our friends and colleagues from other countries, welcoming them to our hospitals and public health departments and packing with them into the Central Hall, Westminster, for the sessions of one's choice. Do you remember the service at St. Paul's Cathedral and the address by His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, or the service at Westminster Cathedral and His Grace the Archbishop of Westminster ? Then there was the opening of the Congress by Her Royal Highness the Princess Royal, addresses of welcome by city dignitaries and government officials, and Dame Alicia Lloyd Still taking the Chair. Thus started a very full week, with papers read on all subjects of professional interest to nurses throughout the world, of social contacts and visits of interest. The social functions included a reception at Buckingham Palace by Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth, and Her Majesty, Queen Mary, to members of the Grand Council; garden parties at various hospitals, and receptions at the Palace of Westminster, the House of Lords, the House of Commons with refreshments on the terrace, and a reception by the Lord and Lady Mayoress, and last but not least, receptions by the Royal College of Nursing and the London Branch with musical entertainment and refreshments.

"Now let us consider the programme of the Congress which is shortly to take place in America. The Board of Directors meets at Washington, D.C., on May 5 and 6, and the Grand Council meets for the rest of that week. This, as you know, is comprised of the officers of the International Council and the Presidents and delegates from each National Council." (The members from Great Britain are Miss D. C. Bridges, President, Miss C. Alexander, Miss G. E. Davies, Miss G. V. Hillyers, O.B.E., and Miss D. M. Smith, O.B.E.)

Miss Smith then described the tentative programme, published in the Nursing Times, March 8, p. 160, and mentioned that all speeches had to be sent in in advance so that they could be printed, usually in three different languages. At discussions, the language problem was difficult, but translations were made usually in French and German. "The atmosphere of the meetings is most inspiring," said Miss Smith. "The flags of the nations represented make a colourful background to the speakers' platform, and the social contacts and friendships formed at these Congresses are quite invaluable."

Miss Smith then answered questions put by the meeting, and a vote of thanks was proposed by Miss C. E. Bentley, who spoke particularly for the generation of nurses who had trained since 1937 and, therefore, knew little of the aims and work of the National and International Councils.

WARD AND CLASSROOM

The Sister Tutor Section, London Branch, invites sister tutors and ward sisters to a discussion on "The Link between Ward and Classroom Teaching in the Training of Nurses," at 7 p.m., on April 21 at the Royal College of Nursing. Miss E. Bocock, of St. Thomas's Hospital, will open the discussion

Above: Specimen 1.—Bilateral ovarian dermoid cysts.—Both ovaries show obvious enlargement. A, the uterus; B, left, ovary containing multiple smooth-walled follicular cysts in addition to a dermoid cyst; C, the right ovary containing a dermoid cyst

5.—The Female Reproductory System

C.—THE OVARIES

THESE three specimens, involving the ovaries, concludes the series on the female reproductory system.

Specimen 1.—Bilateral Ovarian Dermoid Cyst.—In a uterus, with its appendages, both the ovaries are enlarged and contain dermoid cysts filled with hair and fatty material, while in the left ovary several smooth-walled follicular cysts are present as well.

History.—Mary H., age 41, was admitted to hospital for pain in the lower part of the abdomen and dyspareunia. She had had one child eleven years previously. For the last five years the menses had been suppressed, until three months before admission, since when they had been regular. Sub-total hysterectomy was performed and both ovaries and tubes excised.

Specimen 2.—Ovarian Abscess.—The right Fallopian tube, viewed from in front, is grossly thickened and elongated, being curved to cover some two-thirds of the surface of a much enlarged right ovary. This is occupied by a cavity, 3 inches in diameter, filled in life with pus. It is lined by granulation tissue, as is also the Fallopian tube. The left ovary is bound to a shrivelled fibrous Fallopian tube, forming an organized tubo-ovarian abscess. Histological examination shows the granulation tissue to have a non-specific character.

History.—Annie R., aged 36, attended for some six weeks for irregular loss of blood from the uterus. A normal period, followed by bleeding two weeks later, lasting a fortnight, and recurring a fortnight later again, this continuing until admission. There was a tender pelvic swelling reaching as high as the umbilicus, and operation revealed a large right ovarian abscess, with some chronic inflammation of both Fallopian tubes. Cultures were sterile, and although the infection was thought to be gonococcal, no proof of this was forthcoming. Recovery followed upon its removal.

Specimen 3.—Ovary. Torsion of Dermoid Cyst.—A large oval cyst of the right ovary, together with the Fallopian tube of that side is mounted to show :—(1) the dermoid nature of the cyst, with its tough fibrous wall and old partly calcified lining of sebaceous secretion ; it is of quite simple structure ; (2) the result of torsion which has included in its rotation both the Fallopian tube and also part of the broad ligament, the entire mass having become turgid and discoloured by the escape of blood from its strangulated vessels : its viability would have been questionable.

History.—Mary F., aged 39, who had had six children, the last, six years before admission, had been unwell for 18 months, with right-sided pain radiating from the groin to the vulva, occasionally to the hip and knee. The periods were shorter and the discharge black. For 14 days the pain had been very much worse with vomiting and increasing prostration. Operative exploration revealed this cyst, which was successfully removed. A good recovery followed.

Ovarian cysts may contain a clear fluid, simple serous cyst, a gelatinous material, pseudo-mucinous cyst or stale blood, an endometrioma or, as in specimens 1 and 3, skin, sebaceous material, hair and sometimes teeth, a dermoid cyst. They vary in size considerably. The chief way in which an ovarian cyst may endanger life is by "twisting" or torsion of the mass, as in specimen 3. When diagnosed, an ovarian cyst is usually removed because of this danger.

THANKS to the de-requisitioning of 'Holmesdale' at Nutfield by the military authorities last year, Guy's Hospital Nurses' Training School has been the first of the large London hospitals to arrange a new block system in the post-war period. Holmesdale is a large country house three miles from Redhill and it was given to Guy's through the generosity of Mr. W. H. McAlpine and Mr. S. B. Askew, two governors of the hospital, in 1932. During the war it housed large numbers of A.T.S. members; to-day it can easily accommodate 50 to 60 student nurses, and allow plenty of room for lectures and practical nursing classes. This has made it possible to take over the preliminary training school buildings at Guy's for additional teaching and sleeping accommodation.

Well-Equipped

Holmesdale takes in four preliminary schools of roughly 50 candidates each year—a total of 200. The preliminary training school buildings at Guy's provide one large lecture room, equipped with a fine new epidiascope and cine projector, three smaller class and study rooms, and a large reading room. The Revelstoke teaching block provides a practical class room, reading room and office. Its main class room is fitted with cupboards containing ward apparatus, sterilizing equipment, linen, sinks—in fact everything needed for the practice of nursing. In addition the nurses use the lecture and demonstration rooms and museum of the medical school.

The parts of the school are scattered and will, of course, be collected together when the plans for the rebuilding of Guy's materialize. The authorities do not, however, expect to be able to complete the new 1,000-bedded hospital with its medical and nursing school for ten years, and it is good news that Guy's has been able to begin this important advance in nursing education so soon.

Plans for the block scheme, of course, were already afoot, for Miss E. E. P. MacManus, C.B.E., matron, until April, 1946, was Chairman to the Education Sub-Committee of the Horder Nursing Reconstruction Committee and Miss D. M. Smith, O.B.E., Chairman to the General Nursing Council has succeeded her: Miss H. M. Gration and Miss F. Taylor, the senior sister tutors, have each been chairman to the Sister Tutor Section of the Royal College of Nursing, while Miss Taylor also served on the Horder Reconstruction Committee, and Miss D. L. Holland, another member of the teaching staff, is a member of the General Nursing Council. It is not surprizing that the plans follow closely the recommendations of the Horder Nursing Reconstruction report on this matter.

Training Programme

The training starts with a 12-week preliminary training school period, followed by one week's holiday. After nine to ten months in the wards and her first-year holiday, the student nurse has a 6-week study block early in her second year of training; she then gets her second year ward experience and holiday and returns for a 6-week study block at the beginning of the third year and has a further two weeks in the school shortly before her final State examination.

The first and second year and final blocks will be repeated three times each year. This, with two days between the blocks, allows for a ten-day break at Christmas and a nine-week break in the summer for staff and other holidays.

Below: A close-up of the actual application of the new dressing by the non-touch technique

Above: an informal break for coffee helps to divide the morning

The preliminary training school at Holmesdale is in the charge of Miss James, who has two assistant tutors and a domestic science teacher to help her. One of the assistant tutors is a ward sister who teaches practical nursing, and is seconded for this work for six months so that she sees at least two schools through their full course. This makes a valuable link between the class room and ward teaching. In the preliminary school the nurses cover a large part of the syllabus in anatomy and physiology, having lectures from the sister tutor and from medical school professors in anatomy and physiology. The lecture-demonstrations by the medical school staff are largely practical and some of them are given in the first year block because of the difficulty of the distance from Guy's to Redhill. The nurses come up to the hospital by private bus one day each week when they have six demonstrations in elementary science, on such subjects as conduction, radiation and convection of heat, light, electricity, osmosis and dialysis. These are given in the medical school by Professor Stead. They also have four lectures in elementary psychology by Mrs. Norman, a member of the staff of the Child Guidance Clinic, and two on elementary bacteriology by a demonstrator in the medical school. The nurses also have some experience in the hospital wards and have their X-ray, Schick, Dick and Mantoux tests done during these visits.

At Holmesdale the nurses also have lectures and classes in the theory and practice of nursing, learning bedmaking, bandaging, first aid and elementary nursing. They go to Redhill Technical School for cookery classes, and have instruction and some practice in domestic science.

The more advanced subjects will eventually be distributed over the various blocks much as the Sister Tutor Section of the Royal College of Nursing suggested (these suggestions appeared in the Horder Reconstruction Committee's Report, Appendix iv). At present the syllabus for each school will depend on what courses the student nurses have already had under the old system of training. In future the first year block will contain some anatomy and physiology demonstrations by members of the medical staff (Professor Spurrell and Dr. Whillis give these at the moment). More of these will probably be given in the preliminary school period when the new buildings permit it to return to London. The course of 12 surgical lectures and 8 in pharmacology will be covered in this block and there will be 4 more lectures in bacteriology, surgical and medical nursing classes, practical classes in bed-making and bandaging, and visits to the museum : for these practical things the nurses will be divided into small groups, for the total in each block will be 60 nurses as a rule.

One first and one third year block have been held and proved very successful. The nurses attend outside lectures at the Hospital for Nervous Diseases in Queen's Square, the Royal Institute of Public Health and Hygiene and elsewhere, as convenient. The first-year group will include in future not only nurses who have just completed their first year of training at Guy's but also nurses who are already on the Sick Children's, Fever and Mental Parts of the State Register and nurses from affiliated schools. All these nurses will go straight into one of the three first year blocks. They will be excused attendance at lectures on subjects for the preliminary state examinations, and in their place will have special opportunities for learning the methods of nursing used in the hospital wards.

In the second-year block, the nurses will have their medical nursing course, which has been increased to 16 lectures, and their special lectures, including 2 lectures in psychiatric nursing. They will again have practical classes in nursing treatments, bed-making and bandaging on more advanced lines. There will be visits to the museum and to outside lectures and places of interest. There will be case studies in which a group of nurses will describe the care of a patient they have nursed (see page 262), and plenty of time for reading and study and for attendance in the theatre, wards and departments, to see things that they have not yet had an opportunity to meet for themselves. For example they visit the X-ray department and the physiotherapy department and Public Health Department.

The first of the second-year blocks is now in progress and the nurses are enjoying it. They are treated like students. They have breakfast at 7.30 and begin work at 8.30 a.m. finishing either at 4.30, 5.30 or 6 according to the programme, but having one free afternoon for shopping during the week. They have the week-end free from 12 on Saturday till Sunday night. In fact, as one nurse put it, they are for the time being "like other people," a change which is thoroughly good for them, and which they appreciate although they realize that nursing itself, which they are happy to return to, must be a 24-hour service, with evening, week-end and night duty for all to share. Here is, for example, a typical day :—

9—10 a.m. Visit to museum, practical class or theatre class. Break for coffee. 10.15. Physical exercises in the physio-therapy department gymnasium. 10.30 a.m. to 12.10 p.m. (two sessions). Case study : the account given by three or more nurses, the others asking questions and discussing the case; or lecture or tutorial study. 12.15 Lunch. 1 p.m. Lecture. 2 p.m. Study. 3 p.m. Tutorial or practical class. 4 p.m. Tea. 4.30 p.m. Study and reading or lecture.

We were glad to have an opportunity of visiting the school recently and discussing the new plans with a group of nurses who were very enthusiastic. We asked whether they felt that the arguments brought forward against the scheme were sound. Did they, for instance, feel that the period was a time of cramming when they received more fresh information than they could digest and assimilate ? They said they did not; they found that they had more opportunity to read and think about the new material and could learn it more readily than under the old scheme. They found the first few days difficult, as they were not used to concentrating in the student manner so continuously, but after a short time they began to learn more easily and thoroughly enjoyed the course. We asked if they felt that the scheme divorced theory from practice ? They did not. They had already met many of the cases about which they were learning : they had time to think of their ward cases and to visit the theatre and see

When the system was inaugurated last November, the matron and Professor T. B. Johnston, the medical superintendent, spoke to the nurses and told them that they hoped they would make good use of their time, and that in a year or two the value of this experiment would show itself in better care for the patients and a more full understanding of the objects of treatment. We feel sure that these hopes will be fulfilled.

COMPLICATIONS FOLLOWING PARTIAL GASTRECTOMY

—a case study prepared by student nurses at Guy's Hospital

THIS case study was prepared by a group of six second-year nurses at Guy's Hospital. They visited the ward concerned, obtained notes taken by the medical student, interviewed the patient and discussed the case with the sister and nurses in the ward. The radiographer helped in explaining the X-ray plates. The special gastrectomy instruments were obtained from the operating theatre.

When all the material was collected, the nurses demonstrated the case to the remainder of the group, who were out of the wards for six weeks under the block system. The method of gastric suction was shown on the blackboard, with drawings of gastrectomy instruments. The nurses arranged the demonstration as follows :—

The first nurse read the case history; the second nurse showed X-ray plates with the viewing box; the third nurse explained the operation and showed the instruments; the fourth nurse gave a description of the post-operative care and the suction apparatus while the fifth nurse showed pathological specimens of gastric and duodenal ulcers obtained from the medical school museum. The demonstration took approximately 25 minutes, after which the other nurses asked questions of the team. The case was interesting as it showed various complications such as jaundice, auricular fibrillation, venous thrombosis and consolidation of the lung.

History

Mr. F. S., aged 43 years, was admitted on December 13; his history showed that his wife and two daughters were alive and well, also his mother, but his father had died of "chest trouble." The patient had never been abroad, he was a fitter's labourer at one time and is now a paper maker. He smokes ten cigarettes a day and does not take any alcohol. In 1943, he had pleurisy, which left him with a slight cough.

The reason for admission was epigastric pain following meals. Twenty years ago the pain came on during meals and was relieved by vomiting, but made worse by taking food. His own doctor gave him "white medicine." In 1936, he spent eight weeks in a hospital, where an X-ray showed an active duodenal ulcer. He was having injections of a "patent German medicine" into his buttocks daily, but this made no difference to his pain, which was waking him at night and was in the middle of his back. He attended an out-patient department for six months.

Since 1936, the pain had been getting worse and was now almost continuous. He had been working on twelve-hour shifts and the pain used to wake him after two hours' sleep; it was relieved by movement and sometimes relieved by food. The pain was more widespread travelling laterally to the back. In recent years the pain has made him rigid and afraid to move with intention. During 1946, he spent eleven weeks, between June and December, in a hospital and was treated with belladonna and vitamins. The patient's appetite was poor and he had gradually lost two stone in weight since 1936. His bowels were regular, but the stools had been tarry for many days; he had frequency of micturition at night but no pain.

On examination the patient looked fit, was not pale, and showed no obvious loss of weight. No tumour could be felt in the abdomen, but there was tenderness with reflex guarding beneath the right costal margin. The blood pressure was 108/70, pulse regular, and there was no enlargement of the heart: the heart sounds were normal. There was no abnormality apparent on examination of the chest and nervous system.

Treatment and Drugs

The patient was admitted to a surgical ward at 3 p.m. for partial gastrectomy, a diagnosis of a duodenal ulcer having been made from a recent X-ray plate of a barium meal given in the out-patient department. His temperature was normal; he had a bath and got into bed and was seen by the house surgeon who ordered gastric diet, stage 3. The following were prescribed :—haustus chloral et potassium bromide, 1 ounce, as required; Veganin, two tablets, as required; magnesium trisilicate, two drachms, three times a day, before feeds; tincture of belladonna, ½ an ounce, three times a day; olive oil, 1 ounce, three times a day.

On December 16, a specimen of blood was examined and the haemoglobin estimation was 104 per cent. the blood group O and the blood urea 46 mgm. per 100 c.c. The urine was normal. Breathing exercises were started. The patient was shaved from axilla to pubic area. An enema saponis was given, the bowels having previously been regulated with liquid paraffin.

Operation

On the morning of the operation, December 17, extra fluids and glucose were given before 10 a.m. A surgical compress of methylated ether and spirit was applied to the abdomen, and gastric lavage was carried out at 11 a.m., a Ryle's tube being passed and left in situ. The patient was prepared and dressed ready for the theatre. Pre-operative drugs were ordered: morphia, gr. ¼, with atropine, gr. 1/100, and were given at 12.45 p.m.

The operation was performed under a general anaesthetic of pentothal followed by gas, oxygen, ether and curare. A midline incision was made above the umbilicus and the peritoneum exposed. The ulcer was found to be just distal to the pylorus and attached to the pancreas. The liver was slightly enlarged. The greater omentum was freed and the greater curvature of the stomach was mobilized. Much bleeding occurred round the pylorus but was controlled by suture. The pylorus was then mobilized and clamped and the stomach divided just above the pylorus. The sero-muscular coat was separated from the mucous coat, which was then sutured with catgut and buried button-hole fashion, beneath the sero-muscular coat, the corners of which were invaginated. The cardia was sewn off with Von Petz' clamp and the distal portion of the stomach removed. An anterior anastomosis was then performed with the proximal loop of jejunum, using Lane's gastro-enterostomy clamps. A tube drain was then inserted, lateral to the right rectus and to the pyloric stump, with the holes approximating to the anastomosis. Deep tension stitches and Michel clips closed the wound and a dressing and many-tailed bandage were applied.

On return from the theatre the patient was placed in a bed that was well warmed. Oxygen, carbon dioxide and bed blocks were at hand. Gag, tongue forceps, sponge-holding forceps, moist swabs, vomit bowl and cloth were on the locker. A observation chart was ready; hot blankets and a clean gown were on the radiator. The patient was placed in the left lateral position with a pillow at his back; and a quarter-hourly pulse was recorded, the volume was good, and the range from 116 to 130.

Continuous gastric suction was commenced (see Diagram 1). A rectal saline was set up and 40 ounces were given. The patient regained consciousness at 7.45 p.m.; two pillows were then given to him and his hands and face were sponged; his gown was changed and his mouth moistened. Morphia, gr. ¼, was given at 8.5 p.m., and the patient slept and was very quiet throughout the night. He was sat up in Fowler's position at 1.30 a.m., and morphia, gr. ¼, was repeated at 4.55 a.m., 10.15 a.m. and 2.45 p.m.

Nursing Care

The patient was fairly comfortable and general nursing care was given and a moderate toilet performed; the back and parts subject to pressure were treated. Continuous gastric suction was continued and breathing exercises were begun at 3 p.m. As the patient could not pass urine, Carbachol, 1 c.c., was given at 5 p.m., and 24 ounces of urine were passed. Fluids were given by mouth beginning with boiled water, 1 ounce hourly, from 1 p.m. Suction was turned off between feeds, but turned on for five minutes before a feed. Chlorides were absent from the urine and saline was continued per rectum, 80 ounces being given. The pulse was recorded hourly and the temperature four-hourly. Morphia, gr. 1/6, was given four-hourly for the first three days.

On the second day the patient's condition was unchanged; the temperature was 99.4° F., the pulse was 110 and respirations 24; the pulse volume was fairly good. Boiled water 1 ounce hourly, was continued by mouth, with suction before feeds, and the rectal saline was continued, 100 ounces being given. The dressing was changed.

A Set Back

On the third day the patient's condition was not very good: the temperature was 101.4° F.; the pulse rate varied from 108 to 120 and the blood urea was 40 mgm. per 100 c.c. The patient was sweating profusely and there was slight distension. A flatus tube was passed with a fair result. Tests showed that chlorides were still absent from the urine and rectal salines were continued and hourly feeds of boiled water were given by mouth. The tube was turned and the dressing changed. Chest movements were encouraged.

The patient was very quiet all the next day and his condition was not so satisfactory. An intravenous infusion of 6 per cent. dextrose in 1/5 per cent. normal saline was given into the left arm. Thirty ounces were absorbed, but the vein then became thrombosed and the drip was taken down. Boiled water, 1 ounce, was continued by mouth and 80 ounces of saline given per rectum. A clean Ryle's tube was passed and suction was turned on four-hourly. The drainage tube was shortened and a fresh dressing applied.

On the fifth day after operation the patient complained of acute abdominal pain on the left side. The tube was shortened, clips removed and the dressing changed. An intravenous infusion of fresh plasma was set up into the right arm but after 10 ounces had been absorbed the patient had a rigor and his temperature rose to 104.8° F. Heat was applied during the shivering stage, and, during the sweating stage the patient was changed and the heat slowly reduced. The intravenous infusion was changed to dextrose, 4 per cent., in 1/5 normal saline, and a total of 104 ounces was given. Boiled water, given by mouth, was increased to two ounces hourly, and four-hourly gastric suction was continued.

Penicillin Given

Penicillin, 40,000 units, by intramuscular injection, was started because the X-ray of the chest showed signs of consolidation in the right lower lobe. On December 23, the patient showed signs of auricular fibrillation. The pulse was rapid and irregular and ranged from 130 to 134 beats per minute and the apex beat was considerably higher than the radial beat. Digoxin, 0.5 mg., was given intravenously into the drip, eight-hourly. The infusion stopped at midday and had to be set up again in the left leg; the total absorbed was 60 ounces; three ounces of boiled water were being given hourly by mouth. Chlorides were present in the urine, which was orange in colour, contained some albumin, bile and sugar, and had a specific gravity of 1.026. The patient's condition was not good and his temperature was 102° F. and continuous suction was set up again.

The following day five ounces of water were given hourly by mouth and the patient received 80 ounces of fluid intravenously and, in addition, 20 ounces of reconstituted plasma. Gastric suction was carried out hourly, an enema saponis was given, and some flatus was passed. The pulse was more stable.

Thrombosis

The next day the patient complained of pain and tenderness in the calf of the leg and a thrombosed vein was palpable above the level of the cannula; the infusion was therefore changed to the right leg, and heparin, 12,000 c.c., was added to the Vacolitres to help prevent further thrombosis. At 2.30 p.m., the patient had a slight rigor. His breathing also became laboured and continuous oxygen was administered through the Tudor-Edward spectacles. The Ryle's tube was now withdrawn. A turpentine enema was given with some relief and a small faceal result was obtained, but no flatus; pitressin, ½ c.c., and prostigmine, ½ c.c., were given hypodermically. The patient was perspiring freely, and was restless and plucking at the bed clothes. A quarter-hourly pulse was recorded. The urine was found to contain a trace only of albumin and sugar, and chlorides were present. Fluid administration was continued. The dressing was renewed and the first set of deep tension sutures were removed.

Nine days after the operation the tube from the wound began to drain large quantities of dark fluid. Intravenous infusions were discontinued and citrated milk, half strength, 5 ounces, was given hourly. The pulse was much improved and digoxin was continued, but respirations were shallow and oxygen was given as required. One loose stool was passed. At 8 p.m., the patient appeared slightly jaundiced.

Jaundice

By next morning jaundice was distinctly noticeable. The abdominal tube was still draining large quantities of dark fluid and a specimen was sent for report: the result was as follows:—specific gravity 1.016; reaction alkaline; a few red cells present but no food material; mainly bile. The jaundice was thought to be obstructive in character due to trauma during the operation. Suction was now applied to the drainage tube with Sprengel's pump (see Diagram 2).

Above : a diagram showing the method of aspirating fluid from the abdominal wound by means of Sprengel's pump which is attached to the nearby tap

Digoxin was now being given orally and nepenthe, 30 minims, was given three times during twenty-four hours. Respirations were still shallow and rapid and oxygen was given during the day. The calves of the legs and ankles were swollen. Citrated milk, ¾ strength, 5 ounces, was given hourly and a little jelly and custards were taken as well. The faeces were clay-coloured and a specimen sent for examination showed that bile was deficient but not completely absent.

On December 28, the patient showed some slight improvement. Breathing exercises were carried out and oxygen was given when he appeared breathless. Some oedema of the ankles and a small lumbar pad were present but the urinary output was fair. The temperature was 100.4° F., pulse 104, respirations 32; mistura potassium iodide, 1 ounce, three times a day, was ordered because the patient was coughing and expectorating. Pain was controlled by nepenthe, 30 minims. The abdominal tube was draining freely with Sprengel's pump.

The following day the bowels were opened frequently and the stools were loose and clay-coloured. The oedema was improving. Undiluted milk feeds were now being taken and oxygen was discontinued. Aluminium paste was applied to the area around the wound to prevent digestion of the skin from leaking enzymes.

On December 30, thirteen days after the operation, the patient was less jaundiced. Milk, Horlicks, tea, beaten raw egg, custards and junkets were taken well; the general condition was much improved. The remaining deep tension sutures were removed.

The next day the patient appeared only slightly jaundiced and was more comfortable and able to take a gastric diet, stage 2, having mashed potatoes for lunch.

By January 2, his temperature was normal, his haemoglobin estimation, 83 per cent., and the urine was normal. The bowels were more stable and were regulated by liquid paraffin, 1 ounce, as required.

Further Progress

On January 6, the general improvement was maintained and the penicillin was discontinued. By the twenty-third day after operation, the patient was no longer jaundiced; the drainage tube was removed and a gauze wick inserted, and aluminium paste was applied round the wound and sprinkled with fine oatmeal, also, to avoid digestion of the skin. Four days later gastric diet, stage 3, was introduced and the patient was allowed to sit up on a couch for an hour daily. There was a slight rise in temperature at 6 p.m.

On January 18, there was no sign of jaundice but the patient did not feel so well and did not get up. Multivite, 2 tablets, three times a day, was now being given. By January 23, there was definite improvement and the patient began getting up for longer periods. He is now making satisfactory progress and is due for discharge followed by a long convalescence. He will continue with his diet gradually introducing more normal foods until, with moderation, he should be able to eat a full diet.

PRINCIPLES OF ANATOMY AND PHYSIOLOGY FOR PHYSICAL TRAINING INSTRUCTORS IN THE ROYAL AIR FORCE (Published for the Air Ministry by His Majesty's Stationery Office, York House, Kingsway, W.C.2; price 7s. 6d.)

This is a publication for use in the Royal Air Force. The subject is concisely dealt with. The section on bones and muscles is very well arranged and illustrated; the line drawings of parts of the skeleton with the muscles superimposed in bright red are particularly good and clear. The mechanism of respiration is thoroughly explained and there is interesting teaching on physical and mental fatigue, acclimatization to exposure and the effects of boxing, alcohol and nicotine on general fitness and fitness for flying.

THE HOUSEHOLD DOCTOR.—(English Universities Press, Limited, Saint Paul's House, Warwick Square, E.C.4; price 3s. 6d.)

By the use of thinner paper and careful " pruning " the second edition of this book is about half the size of its predecessor, though it contains eight more pages. These are further enlightened by numerous illustrations in the first part, including those of the correct method of bathing and feeding a baby, the use of the tooth-brush, diagrams of the principal systems of the body, and various physical exercises. Among the minor additions may be mentioned the use of the sulphonamides in pneumonia—though this hardly comes within the scope of the book—the treatment of scabies at special clinics with a " parasite-killing emulsion " (nature not stated), the statement that the tonsils play a part in a child's development, and that " they should only be removed after serious consideration and after expert advice," and the use of atebrin in malaria. The use of italics in the cautionary advice about cancer in the first edition might well have been retained in the present one. For households far away from medical help, for those who are anxious to learn the elementary facts about the care of the body in health and sickness, and for all who wish to do the best for the sick or injured person until the doctor arrives, this book will prove of inestimable value.

OBSTETRIC NURSING.—By F. A. Falls, M.S., M.D., F.A.C.S., and J. R. McLaughlin, B.A., R.N. (Henry Kimpton, 25, Bloomsbury Way, W.C.1; price 18s.)

This American textbook has much to recommend it to midwifery students in this country. It is very complete with sections on anatomy and physiology, pregnancy, labour, normal and abnormal in all its aspects. There is a chapter concerned with delivery in the home and one on operative obstetrics and anaesthesia. The illustrations have been done by Miss Charlotte S. Holt. They are all original and the fine lettering merits special mention.

Pre-training in Dundee

After reading the article on the pre-nursing course in the Nursing Times of March 29, I thought that you might be interested to know of the results so far in the pre-training School for Nurses, Dundee, of which I am deputy head teacher.

Pupils are admitted to Course A in August and February and to Course B in August only. Total number of pupils in schools at present is 68. Of these 18 are approaching the end of their respective courses and have been accepted for training by various hospitals providing they are successful in their Preliminary State examination which they take in May.

Some of the girls have been only two years in school. These were the first girls admitted and a special two years course was arranged for them because of age. We wished them to be ready to enter hospital at the age of eighteen. This is, of course, only a temporary measure, carried out with the approval of the General Nursing Council for Scotland and the Education Department.

Eight girls have given up the course. All had adequate reasons for doing so. Some because of domestic circumstances and others decided — and we agreed — that they were unsuited to nursing. The keenness of the girls who remain is undiminished and I consider that this is due to the fact that we teach some elementary practical nursing which is much the most popular subject. We have had no difficulty in placing these girls in hospitals. It is too soon to say how they will fare but I am fairly certain that all of them will finish training without any difficulty.

Abolish the Cap

I have always found the nurse's cap troublesome and stupid and quite meaningless. Let us abolish it for the well-groomed head of hair, putting on the theatre type or some other type of headgear when doing dressings, etcetera, and removing it immediately afterwards. Why should a nurse look so peculiar in order to care for the sick?

Whose idea was it that the English nurse should wear a servant's uniform? Was it Florence Nightingale? One can recognize the English nurse anywhere in the world by her servant-like appearance and black stockings.

County Administration Best?

Your correspondent, County Superintendent, writing in the issue of March 29, is not well informed on the work done by County Nursing Associations and their affiliated districts. May I comment on some of her points?

1. She says that Miss Merry has her head in the sand in giving as her opinion the suggestion that local health authorities may choose to work the home nursing service as the Midwifery Act was so successfully administered, after the 1936 Act, when some authorities seconded midwifery to voluntary organizations. It does occur to me that Miss Merry with Headquarters reports to draw on might have a clearer picture and more knowledge of the position in the country and the trend of events than your correspondent whose letter gives a completely erroneous impression of what does happen.

2. In the 42 administrative counties affiliated to the Queen's Institute of District Nursing in England all undertake midwifery for the county council. In some areas the county councils and municipal boroughs appointed full time county council midwives, leaving the rest to the County Nursing Associations and their affiliated districts. The exception in the rural areas was in districts where no local association existed at the time of the introduction of the Act.

3. In 29 of these counties the supervision of the midwives, at least for those working for affiliated associations, is done by the county nursing superintendent who may or may not be a county council officer. In the remaining 11 there is independent supervision, i.e., a second officer appointed by the county council.

4. The Joint Board of District Nursing, as I understand it, is not an employing body, but is to concentrate on training, examination and enrolment.

5. It is not true to say that the success of the nurse depends entirely on her capacity to please the local committee except in so far as that committee reflects the opinion of the people in the district, whose representative it is. The patients do require a channel for reporting grievances whether imagined or real and without a local committee no such channel exists. A nurse working in an area where there is a good and understanding committee gains in many ways. That members of a local committee expect and indeed insist on preferential treatment for themselves or their friends is an unfair statement and reflection on a grand body of workers many of whom never even use the nurse and who have spent many weary hours collecting benefit or provident scheme payments with no thought of reward other than the maintenance of a service they have considered of importance and value to the people. The very fact that this service is now to become a statutory duty is commendation of the work they have done to maintain and develop it.

6. County Superintendent speaks of a service for 10 per cent. of the population. I do not know where she gets her figures, for even if the service were only available to the insured population they number far more than 10 per cent. of the people. Our information, collected from the survey first made in 1934, and kept up to date since then on information supplied to the Queen's Institute by county superintendents, shows that there is a service available for 98 per cent. of the population. True this is on the assumption that a certain proportion do not call on the visiting service and the figure of 8,000 population for one general nurse may have to be revised. Even allowing for that the deficit is not 80 per cent. If it is, then County Superintendent and her colleagues must take stock of their own reports.

7. She says that it is incomprehensible that the Minister shall empower local health authorities to second these duties to a voluntary committee in view of the fact that he has organized a State hospital service. There is nothing incomprehensible about para. 25 of the National Health Act. Obviously the Minister thinks that some part of the voluntary system is worth keeping. Are not the State hospitals to have boards and management committees composed of voluntary (unpaid) members to manage the hospital, engage staff, etcetera, and will the staff so engaged not be responsible to that committee? Will the staff not be controlled and in some measure directed by them? Is not a County Council voluntary in the strict sense? I have not heard of county councillors receiving payment for the work they do controlling and administering the council's affairs.

Of course it is nice for the administrators, whether medical or nursing, to plan and administer with a map and various statistics as a guide and with little if any regard for the local likes or dislikes. All is sacred in the name of efficiency and it is easier to work, and perhaps quicker, without having to bother about local consultations. I like it myself, but after 17 years of county administration I am not convinced that it gives the best results and gets the people what they want. I think we do want to give them what they will want and use, even though we would like to go round with an outsize broom and sweep away anything, committee or otherwise, which might interfere with our precious plans. Can any nurse or other administrator at local authority level in counties or county boards of a size visualized by the boundary commission really know what is happening on the periphery. Should she be bothered with small details that can be dealt with locally or should she administer the county Service?

Inspector for County Nursing Associations,

SURGERY AND GYNAECOLOGY AND SURGICAL AND GYNAECOLOGICAL NURSING TREATMENT

QUESTION 1.—What is a hernia? What are the common sites at which abdominal herniae may occur? What dangers may occur in a case of untreated hernia?

A hernia is a protrusion of an organ or portion of an organ through an opening or weak part in the walls of the cavity in which it is contained. Common sites for abdominal herniæ are as follows:

1. The Inguinal Canal—this is a canal passing obliquely through the muscle layers of the abdominal wall in the groin just above the inguinal ligament; through it passes the spermatic cord in the male and the round ligament of the uterus in the female. A protrusion occurs into the internal ring producing a sac, and as the hernia develops it descends and may pass through the canal and out through the external abdominal ring into the scrotum in the male, and the labia majora in the female. The sac may contain omentum or intestine or both. The hernia may be unilateral or bilateral.

2. The Femoral Canal—this is situated on the inner side of the femoral artery, vein and nerve which pass under the inguinal ligament and is a small gap lying on the inner side of the artery and beside the vein: through this gap the sac of the femoral hernia passes.

3. The Umbilicus—an umbilical hernia may occur in infants; (a) congenital umbilical hernia, exomphalos, is very rare and is due to maldevelopment of the abdominal wall. It is seen at birth as a protrusion of intestines covered with a thin membrane; (b) hernia occurring during the first few weeks or months of life, is very common and there is usually some underlying cause such as rickets, bronchitis, or constipation. In adults, umbilical hernia may occur when the sac protrudes through the linea alba above or below the umbilicus; it usually contains omentum and transverse colon.

The dangers which may arise in a case of untreated hernia are:—

1. Inflammation—this is usually due to pressure from a truss setting up local peritonitis in the sac. The hernia will be hot, swollen and tender, but there is no tension in the sac and no shock.

2. Irreducibility—the contents of the sac cannot be returned to the abdominal cavity. This may be due to adhesions, contraction of the neck of the sac, or to fat deposits in the mesentery or omentum. The condition is liable to result in strangulation.

3. Incarceration or obstruction—this is usually in an umbilical hernia where the large bowel is involved. The passage of faeces is stopped but the blood supply is unaffected. The patient complains of colicky pains, constipation and vomiting: the hernia is irreducible, tender and distended.

4. Strangulation—constriction of the neck of the sac has occurred so that the blood supply is obstructed and finally arrested. It may occur at the first appearance of the hernia or as a result of additional contents being forced into a long-standing hernia. The venous congestion results from pressure on the thin walled veins and finally, with increasing congestion, the arterial circulation is stopped: this, with bacterial infection, produces gangrene. The patient presents a picture of acute intestinal obstruction: there will be vomiting, at first of the stomach contents, followed by bile stained fluid and later, by brown offensive fluid, the patient will complain of severe pain spreading to the whole abdomen. There will be absolute constipation, signs of shock will rapidly appear and general peritonitis will result, and will prove fatal unless early surgical treatment is given.

FROM ALL QUARTERS

For a Rainy Day

THE London Association for Hospital Services has just issued a further copy of their Hospital Service Plan, showing the improvements effective from April this year. Our readers will, of course, remember that this scheme was introduced five years ago by King Edward's Hospital Fund for London to enable provision to be made for the cost of serious illness. There are three rates of subscription, a Standard scheme, an Augmented scheme and a Maximum scheme. Under the first of these, an individual subscriber pays an annual subscription of £2 12s., and the maximum benefit he can receive is £105. For hospital or nursing home charges, including the use of operating theatre, etcetera, weekly payments up to £7 7s. per week will be made subject to an aggregate maximum of six weeks in any subscription year. For a major surgical operation up to £26 5s. will be paid, for radiodiagnostic service, up to a maximum of £6 6s., and allowances for radiotherapy, consultant's fees, pathological investigations are also included. Nurses and others interested in this well-planned scheme should write to The London Association for Hospital Services, Ltd., 10, Old Jewry, E.C.2.

Population and Prosperity

THE Registrar General's returns for the December quarter of 1946, which we referred to last week, show that for the first time since 1922, the reproduction rate was in excess of that necessary to maintain the population. Since a declining population must ultimately mean the reduction of the position and prosperity of Great Britain this is a matter of great importance, as the Commission set up to enquire into the question of the size of the family recently stressed. The present shortage of man-power and woman-power in industry and in every aspect of national life, professional, social and domestic, shows the effect that the small family has had in the course of one generation. The reproduction rate is calculated by ascertaining the number of girls born in the year or period and likely to survive, and assessing the number of girl children they are likely to bear if the rate is the same as that at the period of their birth. The result is expressed as a ratio. For example, in 1945, 329,900 girls were born and would give birth to only 299,900 girl babies in the next generation, i.e. a ratio of 0.909. For 1946, however, the ratio is assessed at 1.102, which is 10 per cent. in excess of that required to maintain the population at it present level.

Pure Ice-Cream

THE Ministry of Health have issued a statutory order which enforces regulations connected with the making of ice-cream. These regulations were published in October, 1946, circular 183/46, and related to heat treatment in the making of ice-cream. These particular regulations are to come into force from May 1 this year, and direct that ice-cream shall be heat treated after being mixed, and the mixture shall then be cooled rapidly until the freezing process is begun. After freezing, the ice-cream must not be sold unless it has been kept at a temperature not more than 28°F., or if its temperature has risen above this figure, unless it has again been heat treated, and then kept at not more than 28°F. after having been frozen. In cases where ice-cream is made as a "complete cold mix," the heating treatment above does not apply, but the mixture must be converted into ice-cream within one hour of its reconstitution. Regulations regarding the cleanliness of apparatus must satisfy the local authorities, but there seems no suggestion of regulation regarding the people actually employed in making or selling this popular food. Remembering the outbreak of typhoid fever last summer at Aberystwyth (when over 100 cases were traced to one brand of ice-cream), and in other parts of the country, nurses will welcome the news that these and other regulations regarding ice-cream are to be enforced.

Further Scottish Salaries

THE Department of Health for Scotland has issued a further list of salaries, this time for nursing staff working in mental hospitals. In the matrons' section the salaries and emoluments are the same as those of their counterparts in general, children's and tuberculosis hospitals which are training schools, except for those of hospitals with less than 200 beds. For matrons of mental hospitals with under 100 beds the salary is £280 x £15-£400, whereas the matron of a similar sized hospital in the other group has a salary of £280 x £15-£370. In the 100-199 bedded mental hospital the matron is to receive a salary of £310 x £20-£430, whereas the matron of a similar sized hospital in the general, children's and tuberculosis work receives £310 x £20-£[illegible]. The fact that salaries of matrons in mental hospitals are now equal to those of matrons in general hospitals is good. For many years they have not had the same salary or status: they should have it, for their work is of real importance. These increases take effect from July 1, 1[illegible].

Civil Nursing Reserve to Continue

THE Minister of Health, on the advice of the Civil Nursing Reserve Advisory Council, has decided to maintain the Civil Nursing Reserve for the time being. This decision results from the continued shortage of nurses, which makes it essential to maintain the present staffing as far as possible. There are to-day over 4,000 members working in hospitals. In December, the figures were 735 trained nurses, 1,[illegible] assistant nurses and 1,722 nursing auxiliaries. New members in the trained nurses' and assistant nurses' categories can still enrol, but further recruits for training as nursing auxiliaries will be accepted; ex-members who are already trained can rejoin if they wish to do so. Enrolled assistant nurses will now receive £120 a year for the first two years of service, the salary then rising by £10 to £160 a year together with emoluments. The additional £10 above the normal rate is added as in all these cases, because the Service carries no pension rights and no security of employment except that which the shortage of nurses creates.

Pre-Nursing Course Successes

WE have had some interesting replies to our request for information concerning the progress of pupils in pre-nursing courses. Unfortunately we cannot reproduce them all this week owing to the effects of the fuel crisis and two weeks' stoppage in production, together with a cut in paper supplies, have on space. However, they seem to show that in some pre-nursing courses a very high proportion of the beginners complete the course, pass on to hospital and make a success of their training. We hope to give fuller details next week.

NURSES' APPEAL FOR NURSES

Nation's Fund for Nurses

We are much behind the amount we hoped to receive during the first quarter of the year and we should be grateful for more donations.

Life is very difficult for those elderly and handicapped nurses living alone. Please think about them with sympathy and do what you can to assist those who helped others when they were able to do so.

Generous contributions will bring fresh hope that our target of £1,200 will be reached.

Vitamin Therapy
- its uses and limitations

SUSCEPTIBILITY TO INFECTION

is, for a multitude of reasons, high in the Spring months. This year in particular, lack of sunshine, increased exposure to cold, fatigue and the difficulty in obtaining fresh garden and farm produce have combined to produce the conditions which are often the predisposing factors.

Dietary protection can best be assured by the regular consumption of the essential nutrients in the quantities in which each is known to be deficient in the average diet.

COMPLEVITE has been designed especially to meet this requirement.

COMPLEVITE

A single supplement for multiple deficiencies

The recommended adult daily dose provides :—

Often a real worry for the nurse—
the patient making slow recovery from a serious illness

Recovery can be hastened by raising the patient's metabolism

When a patient recovering from a serious illness makes slow progress, it can be extremely worrying for the nurse in charge. This is essentially a nursing job, and the main burden of getting the patient back to normal rests on the nurse.

During illness the patient's vitality has become lowered. All those complicated chemical processes which are constantly going on in the cells of the body are proceeding at a slower pace, and until the metabolic rate, or "living rate," can be speeded up, the patient cannot begin to recover.

The problem at first is to get the patient to take food in some form, so that real convalescence can begin.

But the difficulty lies just here: to speed up the living rate, the digestive processes must be stimulated. Yet, at this stage, when vitality is low, food is usually distasteful. This can be a worrying, anxious time for the nurse.

This problem was the subject of a clinical study at a famous institute. Normal men and women were used and their basal metabolism established. One result emerged: after taking Brand's Essence the patient's living rate rose quickly and the rise was sustained for a long time.

Here is a discovery that may be of vital interest to you. A few spoonfuls of Brand's Essence immediately increase the metabolic rate; once the invalid's appetite is tempted, complete recovery is not far off. Brand's Essence costs 3/-.
